1856 and earlier

The oldest and most prominent nineteenth-century dwelling to remain standing in southeastern Wicomico County is located on the Holly Swamp farm held by the Laws family for over two hundred years. The two-story, five-bay center hall plan house, erected around 1856 according to family oral history, was influenced clearly by Greek Revival design with pediment forms on the gable ends, paneled pilaster at each corner, and Greek inspired moldings that frame the front door and adjacent windows. Although of modern construction, the gable-front stoop was reproduced faithfully after an old photograph of the house. Family history also relates that part of the story-and-a-half rear wing predates the two-story, tee-shaped main block. Nine-over-six sash windows, commonly used during the second quarter of the nineteenth century, survive on this one-room plan structure that stood independently of its adjacent section for a time. Mature cut nails found in the framing, coupled with the nine-over-six sash windows, place its construction around 1830-40.

William Levi Laws (1793-1877) is credited with the construction of this multi-sectioned frame house during his ownership of a tract of land he patented called Promised Land. The 723-acre patent was issued in 1851. An earlier 1826 patent of 100-acre to William Laws was called Table Lands. Over the course of the early to mid nineteenth century, William Levi Laws amassed a considerable agricultural estate valued around $85,000 for the 1860 United States census. He was the wealthiest farmer in northeastern Worcester County. William Laws and his wife Gertrude (1802-1868) had two sons, James and William L. Laws, to whom the farm was left in 1877. William L. Laws took occupancy of the main farmhouse, while his brother resided in a dwelling on the northwest side of the farm according to the 1877 Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson atlas. The brothers are included in the atlas patron list. James Laws is designated with 865 acres, while his brother William L. Laws had control of 1005 acres. In 1915 William Levi Laws transferred 383 ½ acres of the family farm to Victor H. Laws, Sr. (1873-1946). The farm remained in Laws family hands until June 2000.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Holly Swamp farm, located on a tract historically known as "Promised Land," is situated in the center of the Dennis Election District southwest of Powellville, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, five-bay, center hall frame farmhouse faces west with the principal gable roof oriented on a north/south axis. Built in stages during the mid nineteenth century, the three-part frame dwelling is joined on the property by a single-story log smokehouse. A family cemetery is located west of the house on the north side of Laws Road.

Dating from the second quarter of the nineteenth century, probably around 1840, a story-and-a-half, two-bay by one-room plan frame house was erected with nine-over-six sash windows and mature cut nails. Within the following decade the story-and-a-half dwelling was extended to each side with an attached kitchen on the east and a large two-story, Greek Revival, tee-shaped main block to the west. There is an oral family tradition that the main block was erected in 1856. Supported on a minimal brick foundation, the entire house is supported by plain weatherboard siding, and exterior is sheathed by a combination of plain weatherboard siding and asbestos shingles. Highlighting the corners of the main block wide paneled pilasters. The medium pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. At the time of the survey in October 2001 the current owner was in the process of conducting an aggressive building campaign to raise the rear wing to a full two story height and expanding the rooms northward.

The two-story, five-bay west (main) elevation is a symmetrical façade oriented around a center entrance and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The six-panel front door is framed by Greek Revival molded surround with inset panel corner blocks and a multi-pane transom. The front entrance is sheltered by a gable-front portico supported on square posts. The flanking window openings have Greek Revival fluted surrounds featuring plain corner blocks. Louvered shutters remain at each side of the window openings. The second floor is lighted by five evenly spaced six-over-six sash windows flanked by louvered shutters. The base of the roof is enclosed with a boxed cornice.

The south gable end of the main block is marked by pairs of six-over-six sash windows located to each side of the interior end brick chimney. The windows are framed by plain corner block Greek Revival surrounds. The corners of the gable end are trimmed with paneled pilasters that rise to a gable end pediment. The tympanum of the pediment is pierced by a pair of four-pane windows on each side of an interior end brick stack.

The north gable end has a blind wall on the first floor and a pair of six-over-six sash windows on the second floor. The gable end pediment is pierced by a pair of four-pane attic windows to each side of an interior end stack.

The east (rear) wall of the front block is partially covered by a two-story, two-bay by two room rear wing erected with the main block. Six-over-six sash windows framed by Greek Revival corner block surrounds light the first and second floors.

The story-and-a-half rear service wing has been significantly altered with the removal of the second floor knee wall and rafters. The rear wing is being raised to a two-story height. The rear wing was erected in two stages with the middle section dating from the first building program. Nine-over-six sash windows mark the north and south walls of the middle section. Double walls thicknesses between rooms indicate the independent construction of the middle room, which is served by a corner staircase. A late nineteenth-century four-panel door allows access into the second floor room from the main, tee-shaped block. The easternmost section is a former kitchen served originally by an exterior brick stack centered on the rear wall. The old stack has been torn down, and a replacement stack in modern brick is in process of construction against an adjacent shed room off the south side of the kitchen wing.

Standing south of the kitchen wing is a saddle-notched log smokehouse in a deteriorated state. The owner stated that he plans to dismantle the log structure and re-use the viable parts in a new construction south of the present site.

DESCRIPTION SUMMARY:

Holly Swamp Farm is a pre Civil War, mid-19th century farmhouse of good proportions. The dwelling was built in 1856 (the rear portion probably thirty years earlier) on a plantation owned by William Levi Laws.

The dwelling is T-shaped, 2½ stories in the front and 1½ stories in the rear. The front section has rooms on either side with self-contained chimneys. In the rear is one large room which was probably a sitting room with a smaller room on the south side probably used as a burning or sick room. In back of these two rooms is a room which originally had an exterior chimney. In this room is a small wrap-around stairway leading to the second floor. Behind this is a kitchen with a large exterior chimney. The main part of the house on the second floor has an L-shaped hall with four bedrooms leading from it and a small room which was originally an office. The exterior features of the main section are symmetrical with two windows, upper and lower, on each side of the stoop. There is a window on the second floor over the entrance. The front stoop has been reconstructed according to an old photo. An interior feature is a main stairway which is original with a maple hand rail. The mantel in the parlor, doors, trim and floors are all original as is most of the window glass (6 over 6 sash in front and 9 over 6 in the older rear part). On the south side is the one-story porch with original brick floor.

The dwelling is well-maintained, furnished with family and period antiques and oriental rugs.

There remains one exterior building (a meat/smokehouse) which is a log structure. Originally there were implement sheds, a loom house, barns, barnyards, grainery, corn cribs (pole buildings) and tenant houses.

There is a Laws cemetery on a rise a short distance from the dwelling. The oldest tombstone is William L. Laws, Sr. (1793-1877).

SIGNIFICANCE SUMMARY:

Holly Swamp Farm is significant because of the architectural character and age of the dwelling. Of interest also is the old Laws cemetery and a log smokehouse still in existence.

The timber for the house was grown on the farm, cut, dried, sent to the mill and returned to the site where it was used to construct the dwelling. The hand finishing is much in evidence in the fine work on doors, trim and the wide heart-pine flooring.

The dwelling was built and was added onto as the William L. Laws' family grew. Although 1856 is the date most often given, the older part in the rear could be as early as 1826. The house has been owned continuously by the Laws family and a granddaughter of William L. Laws is now in residence.
